

3Sixty at SCI

A Unique Opportunity for Incoming First-year Students

Designed for you.

3Sixty primarily focuses on supporting research, educational development, and social engagement for Pitt students. The program seeks to expand opportunities in computing and information for students who have previously had limited access to these fields.

Program highlights:

- No prior experience needed: perfect for students new to computing!
- Learn the basics: in the introductory course, you'll learn computing foundations as well as its social impact along with your cohort.
- Paid summer internship: apply your knowledge in real-world, hands-on projects addressing community issues
- Community-focused: The program seeks students from around the world, with a special focus on those from the Western PA region or who are interested in solving local issues through computing and information knowledge.

What You'll Do:

- Gain skills in computing and problem solving
- Apply your knowledge by engaging in meaningful, community-driven projects
- Explore career and academic opportunities in tech
